Giving Back

We have been approached with many ideas and ways to give back during this difficult time. I thank you for them all. We have decided to use our 3D printers to make mask holders (I call them Corona Clips) for medical professionals. I want to thank our Technology Department, Mr. Nicolas, Mrs. Sawicki, Mr. Morris and Danny, for utilizing what we have to help and aid our community. These Corona Clips will be used to help those who are wearing protective masks throughout the day. I applaud your efforts, ingenuity, and altruism. I have included pictures of the Corona Clips below.

The #FalconFamily remembers and honors those who have sacrificed for our freedom. We recognize and thank all the families of the fallen. #MemorialDay2020

Congratulations to senior Patrick Flynn for being honored as a @MayoCenter Outstanding Percussionist of the Month. Thanks to Mr. Gugger for nominating Pat! #falconpride

English Connection: Ms. Wnuk

From Ms. Lindstedt: Spring in the Northeast can be argued as the year's most unpredictable season. Fickle weather that can change on a dime leaves most of us in a limbo of sunshine versus rain, and sometimes Mother Nature throws in one more storm just for good measure. However, if you look close enough, you can spot a similarity between this tempestuous season and Grade 11 English: growth. Moving from fiction to nonfiction, students in Grade 11 English undertake the rigorous task of the Research Paper process. Beginning with a deceptively simple research question, students move through this comprehensive, multistep procedure that culminates in a final exploratory essay. Their growth as readers and writers becomes apparent as they apply strategies taught in previous units. In turn, AP Language and Composition students exhibit their own scholarly development as they undertake the task of rhetorical analysis in preparation for their exam and their studies in Grade 12. Students examine the rhetorical situation from various viewpoints to include speeches, letters, essays and documentaries. The written word becomes a platform for "How?" and "Why?" questioning that leads to exploration, discussion and various written responses. Under close scrutiny, what may have been considered just another reading assignment, now emerges as a specimen of powerful rhetoric. Just like the changing seasons, students in Grade 11 English and AP Language and Composition continue to move forward and display their growth as learners.

Business Connection: Ms. Villa

Business: FBLA students participated in a virtual competition. Six business students participated in the competition. A virtual awards ceremony will be held to announce winners that will qualify for a National competition. Stay tuned!

The results are in We had two national qualifiers.

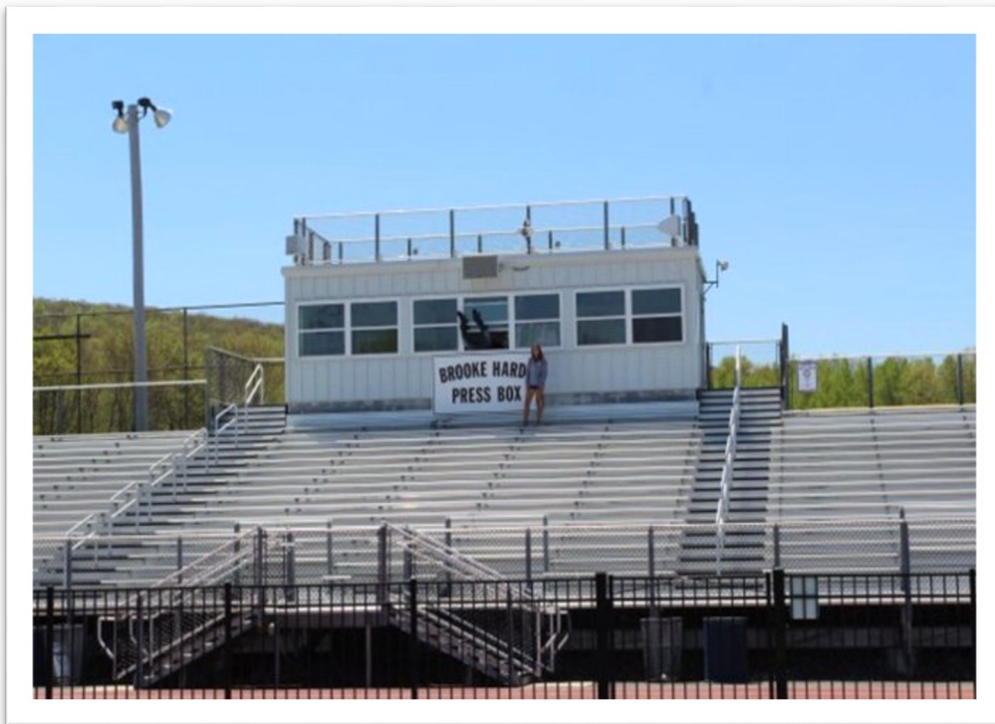

- Olivia Oberman came in 1st place in the state for Public Speaking
- Jacob Wacker came in 2nd place in the state for Sports and Entertainment Management

They will be competing at the national level through the virtual competition. I will have the details next week.

Commitment

What is that dangling out of the press box? Dr. Plotts' legs of course! When you get locked out of the press box during graduation pictures, you do what it takes.

Now, that's commitment!

JTHS graduation pictures are about to begin for the Class of 2020!!!

Supporting the Class of 2020!
